Beijing, CHINA, October 16-19, 2007

ICNP 2007, the fifteenth IEEE International Conference on Network Protocols, is a conference covering all aspects of network protocols, including design, analysis, specification, verification, implementation, and performance. ICNP 2007 will be held in Beijing, CHINA, October 16-19, 2007. Papers with significant research contributions to the field of network protocols are solicited for submission. Papers cannot be previously published nor under review by another conference or journal. Topics of interest include, but are not limited to:

1. Protocol testing, analysis, design and implementation
2. Measurement and monitoring of protocols
3. Protocols designed for specific functions, such as: routing, flow and congestion control, QoS, signaling, security, network management, or resiliency
4. Protocols designed for specific networks, such as: wireless and mobile networks, Ad hoc and sensor networks, virtual networks, and ubiquitous networks

Quality papers dealing specifically with protocols will be preferred over quality papers of a more general networking nature. ICNP will select an accepted full paper for the best paper award.
